

Never Show a T. rex a Book

By Rashmi Sirdeshpande and Diane Ewen

After reading the book, go back and discuss as you look through the story again:

- T. rex might think the book is a hat, or a pillow, or a biscuit. What's a biscuit?
- What other things might T. rex think the book is?
- If you were at the library right now, which kinds of books would you want to borrow?
- What do you think your family would say if they found a T. rex reading books in your room?
- If you were T. rex and tired of being a dinosaur, what would you rather be? An artist, a doctor, a professor, or something else not listed in the story?
- What do you think a prime minister does?
- If you could pass a new law for your town, what would it be?
- Write a story or draw a picture of what might happen if a dinosaur visited your school classroom.
- Think of your favorite animal. What do you think might happen if you could teach it to read?

Additional reading:

The Book Without a Story

Bears Don't Read!

The Biggest Story

The Prince and the Witch and the Thief and the Bears

The Tale of the Valiant Ninja Frog

